

The Ultimate Rose Garden

Lots of blooms with little or no chemicals?

Winter hardiness, color, size, smell?

10 roses, 100 roses?

What is your choice?

Things to read and what to look for if Chemicals are not your thing

Great books on how too and what roses to choose:

- 1) Rose without chemicals – Peter E Kukielski.
- 2) The Time-Life Gardener's Guide – Roses.
- 3) 100 English Roses for the American Garden – Clair G Martin.

I recommend you read & research:

- 1) Pick from the Earth kind Rose list (search in your web browser)
- 2) Pick from the American Rose Trials of Sustainability (ARTS) list.
- 3) <http://www.rosesbyping.com/> Super Hardy roses by Ping Lim
- 4) <https://www.kordes.us> Kortas
- 5) Weeks Roses the “Easy to Love Collection
- 6) Join your local rose society for a couple of years.
- 7) Search your rose selection early (before Christmas) using the online resources listed

Rose bloom sizes (approximate) large to small:

HT, Grandiflora, Climbers, shrub, floribunda, polyantha, min-flora, mini.

Differences in bloom size exist within the above groups but in general HT bloom size would be bigger than Grandiflora, etc.

If your gonna do it, do it right

1. Location: should be sunny, ~ 6-8 hours.
 - In order of merit: South, south east, south west, east.
2. Well drained spot away from immediate tree area.
3. Dig hole slightly deeper than the pot and slightly wider.
4. Throw good compost (tree/shrub soil) in base and then place rose in hole. Back fill using compost making sure the bud union (if grafted type – e.g. HT) is 2 inches below soil level.
5. Use removed soil to form doughnut type form around the rose.
6. Soak with water slowly and babysit the plant for first month. May need watering occasionally if hot.

Order in fall for spring delivery
Place in large pot using potting soil. Plant after first bloom.
